Lost at the Fair

139 words

The fair was loud and bright and smelled of popcorn. Marcus held his dad's hand as they walked past the rides. Then he saw a giant stuffed bear at the ring toss. He let go for just a second to look. When he turned around, his dad was gone. All he could see were legs and shopping bags. Marcus felt his heart thump. Then he remembered the rule they had practiced: stay where you are and find a helper in a uniform. He stood still beside the ring toss. A woman in a green fair vest walked by. "I lost my dad," Marcus told her. She smiled, spoke into her radio and stayed with him. Three minutes later his dad came running. He hugged Marcus so tightly that the popcorn spilled. "You did exactly the right thing," Dad said.

1. What made Marcus let go of his dad's hand?

a ride | a giant stuffed bear | the popcorn

2. Who helped Marcus?

a police officer | a woman in a green vest | his mom

3. How did Marcus feel when his heart thumped? THINK

scared | bored | hungry

4. In this story, "practiced" means WORD

forgot about | did many times to learn it | ate

5. What was the rule Marcus remembered, and why is it a good rule?

Stay where you are and find a helper in a uniform. It is good because a lost child who wanders is harder to find, and a helper can call for the parent.
